

Adrian Sacarea - SMURD

Deputy at the National Training Centre for Extrication and Emergency Medicine in Romania, Adrian Sacarea is an experienced paramedic who has been serving in the field since 2008. A former international competitor with the Mureş Extrication Team, he represented Romania in world rescue challenges in UK, Brazil, and Romania.

Since 2018, he has worked as an assessor, regionally and nationally yearly and as a WRO assessor in South Africa (shadow) and Azores-Portugal in 2024 as medical assessor, supporting the development of high standards in emergency response training.

Adrian has been involved in numerous training programs, including Mass Casualty Incident management, "First responders- Train the Trainers" in Ukraine, Cooperative interventions of emergency services in Mauritania, and multiple workshops on extrication throughout Romania.

He has also contributed to several European projects focused on integrated emergency response, civilian resilience in disaster situations, paramedics development training and youth medical education. Adrian is a key member of an Emergency Medical Team operating under the European Civil Protection Mechanism, playing an essential role in cross-border response and medical cooperation.
